sensible and to the point: "Don't dry your hay too much. Hay moy be daied until it as worthless as straw. As a good coffee maker would say, 'Don't burn your coffee, but brewn it;' so we say, instead of 'potecary medicine,' gathered their herbs when in blossom and cured them in the shade. This is the philosophy of making good hay. Cut in the blossom and cure in the shade. The sugar of the plant, when it is in bloom, is in the stalk, ready to form the seeds. If the plact is cut earlier, the sugar is not there; if later the sugar has become converted to woody matter. Has should be well wilted in the sun, but cured in the cock. Better to be a little too green than too dry. If, on put-ting it into the barn, there is danger of beating in the mow, put on some salt. Cattle will like it none the less. Heat, light and dry winds, will soon take the starch and sugar, which constitutes the goodness of hay, out of it; and the addition of showers render it almost worthless. Grass cured with the least exposure to the drying winds and searching sunshine, is more nutrious than if longer exposed, however good the weather may be. It ever cured, it contains more woody fibre and less nutritive matter. The true art of hay making, then, consists in cutting the grass when the starch and sugar are most fully
